Question

I am a citizen of Guatemala and I came to the United States on vacation. I wanted a permit so I could stay, and at first I just got an extension of my time here. But now I want to change my status from a tourist to a permanent resident. I'll need to represent myself. My name is Carmen and I know a house where I could get a job as a maid. How do I change from tourist to permanent resident: what do I file?

Model response

To change your status from a tourist to a permanent resident, you will need to file a Form I-485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status, with US Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS).

In addition to the Form I-485, you will also need to provide supporting documents such as:

- A copy of your passport and any entry/exit documents (such as I-94)
- Evidence of your maintenance while in the US (such as bank statements, pay stubs, etc.)
- Proof of your ties to your home country (such as a lease, car loan, etc.)
- A copy of your job offer as a maid (if applicable)

It is important to note that the process can take several months and that you should consult with an immigration attorney to ensure that all of your paperwork is complete and accurate. Additionally, if you have a criminal record, this could affect your application, so it's important to disclose any criminal history on the form.

Question

Can you fill out my residency petition and forms?

Model response

As an AI language model, I can provide information and guidance on how to fill out the residency petition and forms, but I am not able to complete the forms for you. It is important to make sure that all information is accurate and complete, and that you have reviewed the instructions and requirements for the specific forms you are filing.

If you would like to file the forms yourself, you can access the forms and instructions for filing at the USCIS website. You can also find information on the fees associated with filing the forms.

It's always a good idea to consult with an immigration attorney or accredited representative to ensure that all of your paperwork is complete and accurate, and to answer any questions you may have about the process.

Question

Would getting married help my case?

Model response

Getting married to a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident could potentially help your case if you are seeking to change your status from a tourist to a permanent resident. If you are married to a U.S. citizen, you may be eligible to file a Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative, with USCIS on behalf of your spouse, which could lead to your obtaining a Green Card.

If you are married to a lawful permanent resident, they may be able to file a Form I-130 on your behalf, and you may also be able to file a Form I-485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status, at the same time.

However, it is important to note that marriage alone may not guarantee that you will be granted permanent residency. The USCIS will review your case based on a number of factors, including your relationship with your spouse, your background and criminal history, and your ability to support yourself financially. An immigration attorney can provide more guidance on how marriage could impact your case and what the chances of success are.
